

Flooring Brochure

Directions:

1. Using all available resources, research and gather information on types of flooring materials used in home/structure construction.
2. Using your research, create an easy to understand brochure which could be available at any construction business.
3. Brochures should include the following:
 - Front cover which includes a creative name for the pamphlet and a graphic
 - Back cover listing at least three additional sources where further information can be obtained
 - Interior pages covering:
 - different types of flooring materials
 - advantages of each type of flooring material
 - disadvantages of each type of flooring material
 - which flooring material is appropriate for the structure being constructed
 - additional interior page addressing any additional information you deem necessary
4. Use creativity and design to make your brochure visually appealing.
5. Attach a citation sheet listing sources of images, illustrations and information on a separate sheet of paper to be turned in with the brochure.