

Treatment Brochure

Directions:

1. Using all available resources, research and gather information regarding the importance of seeking treatment and care when dealing with a mental illness or disorder.
2. Using your research, create an easy to understand brochure which could be available in any doctor or therapist's office.
3. Brochures should include the following:
 - Front cover which includes a creative name for the brochure and a graphic
 - Back cover listing at least five additional sources where further information can be obtained
 - Interior pages detailing:
 - Where to seek help (list types of professionals an individual may seek out)
 - Treatment options
 - Dangers of stereotypes and prejudice
 - How you can help a loved one or friend suffering from a mental illness
 - Tips for managing illness
 - The last interior page should have a highlighted section which addresses appropriate actions in emergency situations
4. Use creativity and design to make your brochure visually appealing.
5. Attach a citation sheet listing sources of images, illustrations and information on a separate sheet of paper to be turned in with the brochure.
